

March 21, 1952

From the detailed staff study attached hereto and conversations with my examiners, I conclude

1. that a substantial portion of the personnel salaries are salvaged. Tab I giving statistics for the weeks ending March 7 and March 14, the only complete figures readily available, indicates that this salvage is 74 per cent.

2. that training persons in the clerical pool should be kept at a minimum and should be limited to the objective of ensuring that such personnel are competent in the basic skills required of the jobs for which they are hired.
